

A Signal Processing Method

Abstract

5 The invention is to provide a signal processing method, which converts conventional data transmission method of using frequency slicing into a data transmission method of using the characteristics of a carrying function. In the invention, the data amount carried at one time is decided by the number of the base functions of the carrying function.

10